

Today's food is well travelled. A pack of green beans in a Northern supermarket may have journeyed 6000 miles, or 60. But while food miles loom large in our carbon-aware times, transporting it counts for less than you might think. And there is a far bigger picture. Food is more than a plateful of emissions.(...)

The publication:

<http://www.iied.org/pubs/display.php?o=15516IIED>

Download pdf:

<http://www.iied.org/pubs/pdfs/15516IIED.pdf>