

"There may be a downgrading of the Turkish diplomatic representation in Paris. It is probable," if the upper house of parliament approves the bill criminalising denial of the disputed 1915 genocide, said the source.

France's upper house of parliament is to vote this month on a bill to outlaw denial of the Armenian genocide, according to a government official. The French lower house approved the law last month, threatening jail for anyone who denies that the 1915 massacre of Armenians by Ottoman Turk forces amounted to genocide. The move sparked a furious diplomatic row and Ankara's decision to freeze political and military ties with Paris.

In 1915 and 1916, during World War I, many Armenians died in Ottoman Turkey. Armenia says 1.5 million were killed in a genocide. Turkey says around 500,000 died in fighting after Armenians sided with Russian invaders. (...)
