Issue 2 of 2010 spotlights health priorities for the twenty-first century. Expert contributors assess that the Millennium Development Goals will not be met in many low-income countries by 2015. They also draw attention to the impact of the global economic downturn and climate change in redrawing health priorities, and the challenge posed by the twin crises in optimizing resources between communicable diseases and emerging non-communicable illnesses. The print and the online editions also feature a visually stunning story on the perils of malaria by award-winning artists Adam Nadel and Kako, and an exclusive photo spread by Wayne Quilliam, Australia's National Indigenous Artist of 2009.

All the articles:

 $\frac{http://www.un.org/wcm/content/site/chronicle/home/archive/issues2010/achieving_global_healt_http://www.un.org/wcm/content/site/chronicle/home/archive/issues2010/achieving_global_healt_http://www.un.org/wcm/content/site/chronicle/home/archive/issues2010/achieving_global_healt_http://www.un.org/wcm/content/site/chronicle/home/archive/issues2010/achieving_global_healt_http://www.un.org/wcm/content/site/chronicle/home/archive/issues2010/achieving_global_healt_http://www.un.org/wcm/content/site/chronicle/home/archive/issues2010/achieving_global_healt_http://www.un.org/wcm/content/site/chronicle/home/archive/issues2010/achieving_global_healt_http://www.un.org/wcm/content/site/chronicle/home/archive/issues2010/achieving_global_healt_http://www.un.org/wcm/content/site/chronicle/home/archive/issues2010/achieving_global_healt_http://www.un.org/wcm/content/site/chronicle/home/archive/issues2010/achieving_global_healt_http://www.un.org/wcm/content/site/chronicle/home/archive/issues2010/achieving_global_healt_http://www.un.org/wcm/content/site/chronicle/home/archive/site/chronicle/home/$