

Le rovine di Pompei/Les ruines de Pompéi/The Ruins of Pompeii

Pompéi se situe au sud-ouest de l'Italie, dans une plaine volcanique à quelques kilomètres de Naples. Fondée au VI^e siècle avant J.C., sur une retombée de lave au pied du Vésuve et sur une route commerciale importante, l'expansion de Pompéi fut rapide, notamment grâce aux échanges entre citées du pourtour méditerranéen. La ville fut complètement dévastée le 24 août 79, suite à l'éruption du Vésuve. Protégée sous un déluge de cendres, Pompéi présente un état de conservation exceptionnel et constitue ainsi un témoignage unique de la civilisation romaine.

Pompeii is located a few kilometres from Naples in the south-west of Italy on a volcanic plain. It was founded on fallen lava at the foot of Vesuvius in the 6th century BC on an important trading route. Pompeii expanded rapidly primarily due to the development of trade between the cities of the Mediterranean region, but was completely devastated on 24 August 79 AD, following the eruption of Vesuvius. Pompeii, preserved under huge quantities of fallen ash, is now in an exceptional state of conservation and as such provides a unique insight into Roman civilization.
